Did you know that...

... KU is run like a corporation?

Although students and staff are the heart of KU, we have no say in how it is run or organized. Our rector is appointed by and answers to a Board whose unelected majority includes politicians, career board members, and CEOs – none of whom have any connection to the daily life of KU.

... KU uses violence against students?

KU management has recently called police armed with assault rifles and attack dogs on pro-Palestine students exercising their right to freedom of speech and assembly. These students have been threatened with expulsion to serve as an example and to suppress further dissent.

... KU has profited from unlawful investments?

Until recently, KU has been profiting from investments in UN-blacklisted companies operating in illegally occupied Palestine. The absence of any transparency in investment reporting makes it difficult to determine what other illegal activities the university may be profiting from.

... KU is not standing up to climate collapse?

According to Dansk Ungdoms Fællesråd, 48% of 16-25-year-olds consider climate collapse the most important political issue. Yet, in its strategic plan, KU has not committed to sustainability as a core strategic ambition, nor has it implemented sustainability policies suggested by civil society groups.

... KU hosts a NATO-funded military research center?

A university should be dedicated to creating and sharing knowledge for the benefit of society, not to boosting war capacity. Yet, KU hosts a NATO-funded military research center (NATO DIANA Quantum Centre), which benefits organizations and companies focused on military intelligence and weapons research.

... KU engages in unethical exchange programs?

KU has an academic exchange agreement with the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, which – through its Mount Scopus campus – is occupying Palestinian land against international law, and has been an active component of the Israeli apartheid regime by providing military, academic, and legal support.

We can change this.
